Foreign Exchanges Reflect Optimistic Views of Arms Parley; Steel Shares Depressed by Developments

Wall Street's response to the Hughes program for armament limitation was complicated and diffused.

The constructive nature of the armament proposals was reflected in changes in the markets most delicately adjusted to reflect the effect of such news.

In the cotton market, which traditionally rallies as a result of events suggesting peace in place of war, there was a rise of a cent a pound, after last week's reaction.

At the opening quotations were firm. The weakness was first manifest in the stocks of those steel companies which are the principal armament makers.

Call money rates eased off to 4 per cent yesterday, the previous low of the year, following the opening and renewal rate of 5 1/2 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates developed strength on the favorable impression created by the armament proposals in Washington.

Cable rates on London at the closing rate of $3.57 showed a net advance of 2 1/2 cents.
